

Linda Toth

I am currently in my twelfth year of being an elementary school principal. My first school I took through the Blue Ribbon journey to recognition, and my current school has become an official "Kids at Hope School." I realized that I was interested in a bigger picture than a classroom, and though teachers are vital and make an impact, as a principal, I feel I can make a more significant impact. Instead of 30 students in my classroom, I touch the lives of all the students in my building. In the role of principal, I also impact my faculty, students' families, and the community. One of my true passions is to illuminate the talents that I see in others and mentoring those who are taking the journey to become an administrator. I believe this is part of the responsibility of the administrator position: to mentor and guide others as they transition from the classroom to a leadership role. My other passions include teaching science; creating hands on, engaging lessons; arts integration; and the Kids at Hope vision.
